

West Park Darlington

In Darlington a former industrial site with a legacy of asbestos processing has been transformed into a new mixed-use community comprising new homes, hospital and school alongside a public park and wildlife area. The park has been handed over to the local council, which is pressing ahead with plans to officially designate it as a local nature reserve.